Most home upgrades, including a new garage door, increases a home's value at least a little. But a garage door replacement tops the list of home improvements with the best return on investment at resale. According to Remodeling's National Cost vs. Value Report for 2026, replacing a garage door gives a consumer a 268.8% ROI (Return on Investment)

WHY IS THE ROI ON A GARAGE DOOR SO HIGH?

A new garage door will increase the value of your home along with other benefits. Here are three key ways a new garage door increases the value of your home.

CURB APPEAL – A very old garage door can make a house look worn out or out of date with the rest of the neighborhood. New garage doors add visual appeal to the outside of the property.

SECURITY – Older garage doors can become safety and security problems as they age because they don't have all the advancements of a more modern garage door system.

EFFICIENCY – New garage doors tend to be energy efficient, especially if they're insulated. Some come with windows to cut down on the need to turn on artificial lights when you're in the garage. Over time, that's less money spent on utilities and a more environmentally-friendly home.

NATURAL is the

new NEUTRAL

Natural wood is making its way throughout the home, because rustic brings warmth, especially to modern minimalism. Using it as an accent color on dark exteriors or as a “third neutral” on black and white exteriors. Ties in with stained cedar cladding, columns and stained front doors.
